If a visitor has to scroll through the site to find information they are looking for, then the time and effort invested to create the site is wasted. It would be preferable for users to find their information quickly, even if they have to scroll. The most common way to achieve this is through the use of a "Home page" link. According to Web designer Richard Rutter, homepages may also be called landing pages, front pages, entrance pages, and other less specific terms. Homepage design Contents Design is the process or work of developing a visual design. Often it is thought that design involves creation of graphic and multimedia design, but these aspects are only one aspect of design. It can also involve modifying existing structures to achieve a specific purpose, or creating a brand, but the practice of design can apply to a wide range of different fields, and a specific term may be applied to a specific discipline. For example, the craft of engineering design is a sub-field of engineering. User interface design is the practice and study of designing user interfaces for visual software applications. Overview Design is about looking at elements and parts in a way that makes them work together better. It is a creative process and an analytical process. It may include taking things apart, examining them, and putting them back together in a new way. For example, when a designer is building a house, they may have to remove walls or partitions to determine what works and what doesn't, and how the pieces fit together. It's about understanding why things work, and thinking of ways to make them do something different. Design is about thinking about things and about "designing things". In the computer science department, and increasingly in the whole of computer science, design is one of the fundamental concepts. It is considered f678ea9f9e
